despite a walkout of 400 CIO transport workers.

In the turbulent automotive industry, there were increasing signs of speedy government action to head off a mass work stoppage.

Henry Ford II, youthful president of the giant Ford Motor Car company, emerged from a conference with Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach yesterday and said he was hopeful "solutions can be found to the problems facing us."

Ford said he would meet with union officials in about two or three weeks in an effort to maintain "full production."

A strike vote was scheduled for tomorrow among 150,000 Chrysler workers and for Nov. 7 in Ford plants throughout the nation.

UAW Vice President Walter P. Reuther, meanwhile, offered assurances that there would be no immediate walkout despite the formality of a strike vote. Reuther said he hoped to reach a settlement on the wage issue without a strike, which he termed "a tragic use of economic power."

CIO Steelworkers' demands for a blanket $2 a day increase—like the auto workers based on a desire to maintain wartime wages—met a cool reception from the U. S. Steel Corp.

Company officials said flatly that they could not afford to increase wages in any amount under existing wage-price policies. CIO President Philip Murray, in turn, said in effect that he wouldn't take no for an answer and called a meeting of his policy committee to consider further action.

A short-lived strike at the Allegheny-Ludlum steel corporation's Leechburg, Pa., plant ended last night when 1,500 strikers voted to return and submit their grievances to regular contract procedures.

On the west coast, Pacific Greyhound buses in seven western states were back on normal schedules following a compromise settlement of a wage dispute. The strike kept 2,700 drivers and baggage men away from their jobs for 18 days.

The Houston, Tex., port remained paralyzed as AFL warehousemen picketed shipping terminals in support of wage demands, and some 15,000 CIO glassworkers continued a walkout at 12 plants of Libbey-Owens-Ford and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company.

Meanwhile, federal postal employees joined the cry for increased hourly pay to compensate for loss of overtime. The AFL Association of Post Office Clerks, representing 40,000 federal postal employees, petitioned congress for a 30 per cent wage increase.

LABOR CHARGED WITH AVOIDING ANY BARGAINING

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—Labor has stepped into management's old shoes and now is evading and by passing true collective bargaining. O. C. Cool, director of the Labor Relations Institute, New York, said last night.

Cool told the Chicago chapter of the Controllers Institute of America that the greatest need in labor-management relations is "a return to true collective bargaining."

"For years labor accused management of ignoring the negotiating process," Cool said.

"But now the shoe is on the other foot. The strategy of the unions is to steer clear of the negotiating process by injecting such obstacles as strike votes, slow-downs, 'good faith' increases and other pre-bargaining demands."

contrary, it is likely that the President's recommendations to congress yesterday went further than most military men had dared hope.

But among senior officers of the armed services there is an anxious feeling that we should have adopted a strong and definite policy on post war national defense before this.

As long ago as last June 16 a parade of Army and Navy men appeared before the house post-war military committee. Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, told the committee that adoption of a universal military training program was an immediate matter of "urgent necessity." Marshall chooses his words carefully. When he says something is immediate and urgent he means it requires attention right now. That was four months ago.

Marshall frankly told the committee that a definite and strong military police here would make us diplomatically effective abroad. He was thinking particularly of peace terms. Some officers here recall the late Theodore Roosevelt's advice to "speak softly, but carry a big stick."

The general put that classic phrase in more diplomatic language before the committee when he said:

"The acceptance at the present time of a general policy recognizing the necessity for universal military training would, in my opinion, have a far reaching effect in obtaining satisfactory international agreement on terms of peace."

United States' dissatisfaction with the post-war course of foreign affairs is a matter of record. The failure of the London conference of foreign ministers was the world's first big, post-war disappointment.

Administration leaders in congress are well aware that Mr. Truman's proposals face tough sledding. House Speaker Sam Rayburn went into a huddle today with Democratic floor leader John W. McCormack, Mass., and Chairman Andrew J. May, Ky., of the military affairs committee, to plan a course of action.

May declined to say when his committee could take it up. But he pointed out that it must first complete pending bills to establish an atomic energy control commission and to appeal the war labor disputes act.

Mr. Truman emphasized in his message that youths in training under his program would retain civilian status. He contrasted it with conscription, explaining that trainees would not be enrolled in the armed forces.

Sen. Edwin C. Joseph, D., Colo., acting chairman of the senate military affairs committee, said it was conscription nevertheless, and added: "I still don't like conscription." He felt the committee could not take up the measure before Jan. 15.

Some members of congress preferred a program that would not bind teen-age youths to a full year at one time.

A few suggested that trainees be permitted to substitute national guard or reserve officer training corps program over longer periods.

BLIND WORKER IN PRISON FOR MAILING BOMB

BEAUMONT, Tex., Oct. 24—Maurice Knapp, 28-year-old blind Cleveland, O., war worker began a 20 year prison sentence today on charges of sending a homemade bomb through the mails.

A federal court jury found Knapp guilty after he testified that he had mailed the bomb, rigged with shotgun shells, as a prank. Sentence was pronounced by Federal Judge Randolph Bryant.

The bomb, mailed last July 2 to Doris Peveo of Beaumont, failed to explode when the wrapper was removed from the package.

the recent Venezuelan revolution found lend-lease planes, machine guns, tanks and jeeps used by the rebels to overturn the established government.

The Indonesian situation also has a potential parallel in China. There, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek has large American-trained and equipped forces to bolster his position as against Chinese Communists.

All this has placed the United States in a position of contributing, however unwittingly and however indirectly, to the preservation of governments in some instances and to their overthrow in others. Officials maintain silence to keep from sanctioning any aggravating precedents.

Dr. I. R. Soekarno, Indonesian national leader, has appealed to President Truman to stop the Dutch from using Allied equipment in the Indies unrest. The United States does not plan to reply, feeling that a response might give a degree of recognition to Soekarno and further complicate the situation.

John Carter Vincent, director of the state department's office of far eastern affairs, said last week that this government recognized Dutch sovereignty in the East Indies.

No newsmen were present at the execution and Justice Minister Johann Cappellen refused to reveal whether Quisling had died bravely or had become hysterical as he did at his trial.

Quisling was the first of the European traitors to sell out his country to Germany. With his connivance, the Germans invaded Norway April 9, 1940, and within a few weeks had overrun the entire country.

At his trial, it was brought out that Quisling before and after the German invasion had dealt with such Nazi leaders as Adolf Hitler, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Marshal Wilhelm Keitel.

PRAYER MEETING BY MAIL LEADER HELD BY POLICE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24—Arthur L. Bell, "voice" of Mankind United, today defended his Christ Church of the Golden Rule as a "living church," which holds prayer meetings by mail.

Attorney general's deputies seeking to remove Bell from control of the $3,600,000 religious organization said they found it owned several business enterprises, but no church.

Deputy Clarence Linn charged that Bell kept no church records and used church money for personal activities.

"We have located everything except a church, a prayerbook or an edifice," Linn said. "We have found resorts, restaurants, laundries, lumber mills, bakeries, dairies, hotels and numerous other enterprises running on a large scale, and a threat by Bell to convert all the property into cash."

The members worked cooperatively in the organization's holdings and didn't need a church building because they did their praying at home and got religious instructions by mail, Bell said.

JAP NEWSPAPER IS ACCUSED OF BREAKING RULE

TOKYO, Oct. 24—A spokesman for General MacArthur issued a blunt order to leading Japanese newspapers today charging them with distorting news and failing to comply with a recent headquarters directive calling for unrestricted discussion of the imperial household.

Col. Ken R. Dyke called on the newspapers to establish more "independent" editorial policies or make way for a press that will.

Dyke, chief of MacArthur's civil information and education section, outlined a four-point program for the Japanese press and radio. The order was issued as one of Tokyo's leading newspapers became involved in a "labor dispute" with employees who demanded the resignation of the management.

Five employee representatives who brought demands for "democratization" of the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi were discharged, the employees met and voted to refuse compliance with the dismissal order.

Meanwhile assistant secretary of war John J. McCloy made an urgent telephone call to Washington and worked until 3 a. m. with his staff after daylong conferences with MacArthur yesterday.

when a Mr. Cook of near Duvall who is now in the county jail facing a charge of driving while intoxicated struck a parked car, the sheriff's office stated.

Shortly after this first accident had occurred, another happened at the scene when the driver of another car came through and stopped to look at the accident. Then a truck came through and found that it didn't have much clearance and struck the car which had stopped to view the wreck, the sheriff's office reported.

The fifth accident occurred Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. on route 56, one mile east of Circleville when Wilbur E. Engel of Creola was thrown out of his truck just before it turned over in a ditch after skidding off the road. The front end of the truck was badly damaged and the bed was torn off. Mr. Engel was very fortunate in being thrown out of the truck into a waiting bed of coal, suffering only slight bruises, the sheriff's office reported. Mr. Engel said that he did not know what caused the accident.

executed Norwegians who opposed the Quisling regime.

No newsmen were present at the execution and Justice Minister Johann Cappellen refused to reveal whether Quisling had, died bravely or had become hysterical as he did at his trial.

Quisling was the first of the European traitors to sell out his country to Germany. With his connivance, the Germans invaded Norway April 9, 1940, and within a few weeks had overrun the entire country.

At his trial, it was brought out that Quisling before and after the German invasion had dealt with such Nazi leaders as Adolf Hitler, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Marshal Wilhelm Keitel.

PRAYER MEETING BY MAIL LEADER HELD BY POLICE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24—Arthur L. Bell, "voice" of Mankind United, today defended his Christ Church of the Golden Rule as a "living church," which holds prayer meetings by mail.

Attorney general's deputies seeking to remove Bell from control of the $3,600,000 religious organization said they found it owned several business enterprises, but no church.

Deputy Clarence Linn charged that Bell kept no church records and used church money for personal activities.

"We have located everything except a church, a prayerbook or an edifice," Linn said. "We have found resorts, restaurants, laundries, lumber mills, bakeries, dairies, hotels and numerous other enterprises running on a large scale, and a threat by Bell to convert all the property into cash."

The members worked cooperatively in the organization's holdings and didn't need a church building because they did their praying at home and got religious instructions by mail, Bell said.

JAP NEWSPAPER IS ACCUSED OF BREAKING RULE

TOKYO, Oct. 24—A spokesman for General MacArthur issued a blunt order to leading Japanese newspapers today charging them with distorting news and failing to comply with a recent headquarters directive calling for unrestricted discussion of the imperial household.

Col. Ken R. Dyke called on the newspapers to establish more "independent" editorial policies or make way for a press that will.

Dyke, chief of MacArthur's civil information and education section, outlined a four-point program for the Japanese press and radio. The order was issued as one of Tokyo's leading newspapers became involved in a "labor dispute" with employees who demanded the resignation of the management.

Five employee representatives who brought demands for "democratization" of the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi were discharged, the employees met and voted to refuse compliance with the dismissal order.

Meanwhile assistant secretary of war John J. McCloy made an urgent telephone call to Washington and worked until 3 a. m. with his staff after daylong conferences with MacArthur yesterday.

was its levy on the manufacture of stoves.

George said there might also be an attempt to raise the personal income tax exemption from $500 for the taxpayer and each dependent to $600 each. That would take about 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 more taxpayers off the rolls and cost the treasury an additional $1,200,000,000 in revenue next year.

Both house and senate committee bills already provide for dropping approximately 12,000,000 low income persons from the tax rolls next year.

FIVE ACCIDENTS ARE REPORTED

when a Mr. Cook of near Duvall who is now in the county jail facing a charge of driving while intoxicated struck a parked car, the sheriff's office stated.

Shortly after this first accident had occurred, another happened at the scene when the driver of another car came through and stopped to look at the accident. Then a truck came through and found that it didn't have much clearance and struck the car which had stopped to view the wreck, the sheriff's office reported.

The fifth accident occurred Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. on route 56, one mile east of Circleville when Wilbur E. Engel of Creola was thrown out of his truck just before it turned over in a ditch after skidding off the road. The front end of the truck was badly damaged and the bed was torn off. Mr. Engel was very fortunate in being thrown out of the truck into a waiting bed of coal, suffering only slight bruises, the sheriff's office reported. Mr. Engel said that he did not know what caused the accident.

OPA Gets Lambasting In Congress

for the country, especially for the businessman who is being forcibly put out of business.

Sen. Homer E. Capehart, R., Ind., blamed the unemployment of "hundreds of thousands of people" on OPA because, he said, the agency:

1. "Hasn't processed cases fast enough—and hundreds of manufacturers haven't been given a price to sell at."

2. "In hundreds of instances has set prices which make manufacturers sell at a loss."

3. "In thousands of instances has set prices at which manufacturers break even, but at which they make no profit."

It all kept Price Chief Chester Bowles very busy. Yesterday he appeared before the senate banking committee and asked that price and rent controls be continued beyond June 30 next year, the day they expire by law.

Today, he and Reconversion Director John W. Snyder were called before a senate small business committee to testify on the administration's policy toward post-war construction. Tomorrow it's the banking committee again.

DAV DENOUNCES SMITH; TRAINING PLAN ENDORSED

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—The Disabled American Veterans, third largest ex-service group, closed their 24th annual convention with a denunciation of Gerald L. K. Smith, leader of the Christian veterans of World War II.

The delegates adopted a resolution branding Smith "democracy's public enemy number one," and charged that many of the group's members have been "proven to be holdovers from the America First committee."

The DAV delegates also heartily endorsed President Truman's plan of universal military training and urged that the house committee to investigate un-American activities, led by Rep. Rankin, (D., Miss.), be encouraged in its work.

The 1946 convention will be held in Portland, Ore.

U. S. TO DONATE $1,000,000,000 FOR UNNRA WORK

ROME, Oct. 24—The United States will donate $1,000,000,000 to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration by the end of the year and probably another billion in 1946, U. S. Sen. Claude Pepper, D., Fla., said last night.

However, he warned at a press conference, Europe must not take the United States for a "Santa Claus." America expects other countries to work for their living. He cautioned nations against spending money needed for reconstruction on building up arms.

Pepper said it would be a mistake for France to start along the road back by strengthening her army at the expense of her people.

"France is not a world top military power and won't be in our lifetime," he said.

Pepper said he asked Italian Foreign Minister Alcide de Gasperi whether Italy intended to build up her military forces and quoted him as replying:

"No! No! No! Italy is through with that."

Pepper is touring Europe and the Middle East on an investigation of political and economic conditions as a member of the Senate foreign relations and small business committees.

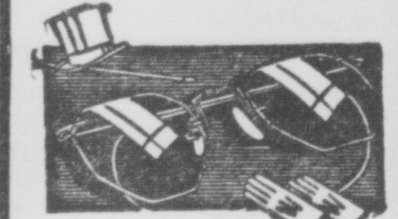

PEIPING, Oct. 24—Col. Julian N. Frisbie of Springfield, Ohio, assumed duties as chief of staff of the first Marine division today. As commander of the Fifth Marine regiment, he had led Marines back to Peiping earlier this month. Col. Robert E. Hill of Stuttgart, Kan., a veteran of Guadalcanal and Okinawa, succeeded Frisbie as regimental commander.

TOO MUCH DDT IS DANGEROUS

Indiscriminate Use Can Be As Dangerous As Atomic Bomb, Professor Says

NEW YORK.—Indiscriminate use of DDT can be just as dangerous as the atomic bomb, according to Dr. C. H. Curran of the American museum of natural history.

Dr. Curran was one of more than a dozen experts who spoke during a forum on the powerful, new insecticide at the opening of the 41st annual convention of the National Audubon Society.

"Eventually," Dr. Curran said, "we will find that we have in DDT just about the perfect insecticide. But meanwhile its indiscriminate use without proper knowledge can be just as dangerous as the atomic bomb."

The speakers agreed that DDT used over wide areas to kill off insect pests, if not carefully applied, could do great harm in killing insects beneficial to man as well. A couple of instances were cited in which DDT was used improperly in apple orchards. It killed the insects harmful to the fruit but also killed those of which would have pollinated the trees with the result that they either failed to produce or the crops were abnormal.

Dr. Clarence Cottam of the fish and wild life service of the U. S. department of the interior, said that he regarded the pollution problem as one of the most serious to be considered in connection with the use of DDT.

"DDT should be used only in areas where the importance of destroying certain insects will outweigh the loss of those insects which are beneficial to man," Dr. Cottam said. "Its dosage should be kept to a minimum."

Dr. P. N. Annand, chief of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine of the U. S. dept. of agriculture, said that, "DDT in quantities large enough to give adequate control of the insects involved can be applied without undue damage to the insects that are beneficial or the wild life in those areas."

As far as household pests are concerned, the experts point out that DDT is highly effective, but slow-acting. Don't expect quick death, they say. Entomologists draw the following chart of its effectiveness for the housewife:

Bed-bugs and silver-fish: extremely effective.
Flies, mosquitoes, gnats and fleas: very effective.

Carpet-bugs and clothes moths: less effective (supposedly because of the difficulty of applying DDT to them.)

Cock-roaches: reasonably effective.

Dr. Victor K. La Mer of the chemistry department at Columbia university, pointed out on the basis of experiments cited during the discussion, DDT sprayed from airplanes kills birds, but when it is sprayed from apparatus on the ground it does not. Dr. La Mer has developed a fog generator for the dispersal of DDT which he said will kill mosquitoes one mile distant, downwind.

DDT's effect on bird-life remained a moot point. In one experiment where DDT was applied at two pounds per acre, bird life was reported unaffected. In another test, here 5 pounds per acre was the dose, all the birds in one square mile under observation disappeared. Many were found dead.

It was pointed out that the application of five pounds per acre was purely for experimental purposes; that the dosage for insect control would be much lower.

DDT kills small fish that feed near the surface but does not appear to affect deep-feeding fish. On a stretch of island beach, between the Atlantic ocean and Barnegat Bay, DDT was applied last summer in a dose of one-half pound per acre. It fell about 75 feet off-shore and floated in. All mosquitoes and flies were eliminated but two days later it was estimated that 200,000 small dead fish had been cast up onto a nine-mile stretch of beach.

Dr. Annand said he would recommend not using DDT in dosages greater than one pound per acre. This amount he believed would not be detrimental to wild life. He said many feared use of DDT would disturb the "balance of nature."

"What is the balance of nature?" he asked. "It is my impression that nature is generally out of balance rather than in balance."

The anglers he knows, says Zadok Dumkopf, would prefer a magnifying glass to a radar gadget.

CHS GRADUATE WRITES MUSIC FOR NAVY POEM

Ralph Barnhart, chief of Station WOR's arranging staff and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Barnhart, Montclair avenue, has set to verse a poem written by an unknown Navy man, according to an article in the current issue of Newsweek.

The poem was read by Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz at the dinner given for him in New York. He said the verse had been written by a naval officer in the Pacific and sent home to his wife.

The poem was about "Patsy McCoy, an American boy," who had left his home in New York to go to sea with Task Force 38. There were four stanzas to it.

News week states: "WOR in New York was broadcasting the dinner: The poem was heard on the air and duly recorded. Taken by its ingenious appeal and singability, Ralph Barnhart, chief of WOR's music-arranging staff, decided to set the verse to music. By working hard all the next day he got it ready for the 11 o'clock news broadcast that night. Hugh Thompson, Metropolitan Opera baritone, sang it as a new novelty son, with words by an unknown Navy man.

"A Washington D. C. listener heard the song and recognized it as the poem her husband Capt. William Gordon Beecher, had sent her. She got in touch with WOR and informed officials Capt. Beecher is a professional song-writing member of ASCAP. She copyrighted her husband's material and made arrangements with his regular publishers to put out the new song with the Barnhart music as soon as possible."

Mr. Barnhart was graduated from Circleville high school with the class of 1925.

More than 30 inches of rain fell in Tampa, Florida, during the six weeks beginning with June 15th, following the longest dry spell on record.

THE RIGHT TRACTOR FOR THE PARTICULAR JOB

THE proverbial Jack-of-all-trades was master of none. The modern world of science and technology passed him by.

The same principle applies to farm tractors. The tractor that does a wide variety of jobs unsatisfactorily can't possibly produce the greatest results at the least cost in any job.

But that's what the farmer—particularly the small operator—has got to do to meet postwar competition: he's got to produce the most food possible with the least effort and, consequently, at the lowest cost.

The farmer with 10 acres in truck crops needs one kind of tractor. The farmer with 100 acres in wheat alone needs another kind—or, as is usually the case, two or more different tractors. The tractor which does a good job on the Great Plains may be useless in the rice territory. And so it goes.

Conditions of climate, the lay of the land, and the character of soils in the different parts of this vast country, together with wide variations in the nature of crops and the size of operations, combine to produce wide differences in the requirements for tractors. Harvester's policy is to meet all these requirements.

That is why Harvester's postwar line includes a great variety of Farmalls and other specialized tractors and attachments rather than a single tractor with a single system of tools. Every tractor in the line was developed after scientific research and testing under actual operating conditions showed the specifications needed for efficiency and economy.

Every Harvester-built tractor is the right machine for its particular job.

caught in the mill of the war and drafted into the German army. Karl is a blonde, tall, German boy of 20 years.

Fritz being 32 is somewhat more mature than Karl and is also tall, but has dark features. He said that he had worked in New York chain stores. Both of the men were former New Yorkers. Fritz proved himself the more talkative of the two and demonstrated that he was very well educated, discussing various phases of philosophy, history, and current events with much knowledge. Both spoke perfect English and German besides having knowledge of Russian, French, and other European languages.

The amazing thing was that instead of displaying the usual arrogance of indoctrinated Nazi soldiers, these young men profess a strong belief in American democracy.

When asked why Fritz gave the answer for both by saying, "We both lived in America long enough to know what it's really like. When you compare America with Europe, America almost seems like Utopia."

Karl, who was the only one of the two actually to fight with the Germans, denied all knowledge of any atrocities there. He said, "The average German didn't know about that kind of thing. I can't say what went on behind closed prison doors, but I never saw the atrocities myself."

Both said they would like to stay in the United States. They gave as their reasons, "First because of the right of free expression along with the tolerant live and let live attitude of the people, and second because of the economic security."

"Any totalitarian system is bad. You may have a wonderful leader for awhile, but you never know what will happen if you have no freedom of election to toss him out when he goes haywire. That's why democracy is the only good government," Fritz asserted.

Karl who declared that he would rather be in an American jail than in Hitler's Germany said, "I never favored the nationalistic policies of Germany, but as I was born in Germany, I thought that I ought to fight to defend it. I never concerned myself with political philosophies."

When asked if he found fault with the slow workings of democracy, Fritz stated, "The guarantee it gives us of deciding for ourselves what action will be taken by the government is worth any possible delays that might be encountered and democracy has proven in this war that it can come through with the stuff that is needed to be victorious."

Fritz declared that the German people were fooled by the warlords and the Nazis at first when they were willing to try anything to get out of the terrible economic mess they were in and that finally they had chosen National Socialism and once they were in they could not get out.

He said that criminals ought to be punished, but that the German people as a whole were not to blame. They are little different in nature from people elsewhere, but they were absorbed to a large extent by the Nazi environment. This was especially hard on the German youth, who were heavily indoctrinated, he said, but the older Germans retained at least a little of the old democratic spirit of the pre-Hitler days to give some hope that Germany may pull out of this war a better nation.

"When they meet each other, there really isn't such a great difference between the Germans and the Americans as some people think," Fritz declared.

"The most important thing, is not hatred, but understanding. No nation should try to force a thing. Germany took the wrong course to settle any grievances that it may have had. Boundaries should be settled by a world court," Fritz added.

"The idea of clannism and race superiority is a dangerous thing in any country. As soon as one Hatfield hits a McCoy, a McCoy hits a Hatfield and then the fight is on. Lines are drawn up that can be crossed. Race is set against race, class against class, and nation against nation. These differences should be suppressed. Democratic tolerance is the true key to world peace," the self-taught Fritz stated.

When asked if he thought there would be another war Fritz said, "No, I think that people are so horrified that there can't be another war."

Then with a quick change of thought he exclaimed, "Unless there is another madman."

Fritz was in Germany in 1939 after several years absence and said that he could tell that indoctrination was having its effect, even on persons whom he had formerly known as democrats.

"The average person is so taken up with his daily work and entertainment that he doesn't trouble himself much with politics. In Europe, where the control of the press was seized by one party, this was fatal, but in America there is a virile press that promotes and protects democracy. On this rock American democracy can firmly stand," he said.

Commenting on compulsory military training, Karl said, "I think a little military training is good for a young man. The disciplipline is excellent education for future life."

When asked about the atomic bomb, Fritz said, "It is a danger to civilization. I don't think that civilization has progressed far enough to be ready for it. Especially is this true of Europe. Much educational work must be done there if disastrous future wars are to be prevented."

Fritz, who is a bachelor, said that he thought Ohio girls were very good looking. He mentioned a girl whom he chatted with at a restaurant in Cambridge, mentioned her name, and said she was the prettiest girl he had seen in a long time.

"The amazing thing about American girls compared with European girls," he said, "is that even the farm girls in America are pretty and could take their place on Park avenue with the best of them. In Europe this is far from the case. The country girls are peasants whose morn-to-night drudgery spoils their appearance. Only the wealthy girls in the cities are ever nearly as beautiful as the American girls are everywhere."

Karl was persuaded to tell a humorous anecdote. "It was like this," he explained. "We were on duty on the Eastern Front. One day the major wanted rabbit to eat; so he sent me and the cook out to get one. We hunted and hunted and we couldn't find one. Finally we spotted an old tomcat. So we took him back and fixed him up like rabbit stew. Then we had a big party and we all drank German whiskey. The major remarked that it was the best rabbit he had ever eaten. Every-

When asked if he thought there would be another war Fritz said, "No, I think that people are so horrified that there can't be another war."

Then with a quick change of thought he exclaimed, "Unless there is another madman."

Fritz was in Germany in 1939 after several years absence and said that he could tell that indoctrination was having its effect, even on persons whom he had formerly known as democrats.

"The average person is so taken up with his daily work and entertainment that he doesn't trouble himself much with politics. In Europe, where the control of the press was seized by one party, this was fatal, but in America there is a virile press that promotes and protects democracy. On this rock American democracy can firmly stand," he said.

Commenting on compulsory military training, Karl said, "I think a little military training is good for a young man. The discipline is excellent education for future life."

When asked about the atomic bomb, Fritz said, "It is a danger to civilization. I don't think that civilization has progressed far enough to be ready for it. Especially is this true of Europe. Much educational work must be done there if disastrous future wars are to be prevented."

Fritz, who is a bachelor, said that he thought Ohio girls were very good looking. He mentioned a girl whom he chatted with at a restaurant in Cambridge, mentioned her name, and said she was the prettiest girl he had seen in a long time.

"The amazing thing about American girls compared with European girls," he said, "is that even the farm girls in America are pretty and could take their place on Park avenue with the best of them. In Europe this is far from the case. The country girls are peasants whose morn-to-night drudgery spoils their appearance. Only the wealthy girls in the cities are ever nearly as beautiful as the American girls are everywhere."

Karl was persuaded to tell a humorous anecdote. "It was like this," he explained, "We were on duty on the Eastern Front. One day the major wanted rabbit to eat; so he sent me and the cook out to get one. We hunted and hunted and we couldn't find one. Finally we spotted an old tomcat. So we took him back and fixed him up like rabbit stew. Then we had a big party and we all drank German whiskey. The major remarked that it was the best rabbit he had ever eaten. Everyone in the crowd was jovial. Then a captain popped up and said, 'That wasn't rabbit it was cat.' This made the major furious and very sick at the stomach. The next day he called a close inspection of the men and when he found that one of them had a button loose, he made him scrub the barracks with a tooth brush for three days."

GOOD WILL

THIS may be a good time to cultivate some new lodges or other organizations, along the general line of Societies for the Preservation of the Human Race. Many people lately have lost faith in mankind, and to tell the truth they can't be blamed much for their disillusionment.

Yet, humanly speaking, this has been a pretty good old world in its time, with quite a few things about it that will still bear inspection. There are still, on this planet and in the hearts of ordinary people, enormous reservoirs of good will. For the most part, when we go wrong in a big way it is through fear. And lately fear drives us to the production of bombs so powerful that, for a little while at least, they can renew confidence in our own life and its opportunities.

But it is not well to put our faith altogether in bombs, or in any other material or destructive thing. The only thing that really counts, on this worried planet, is the ancient recipe of "Peace on Earth to men of Good will." When good will is lost, all is lost.

REBUILDING

WELL, there is at least one reassuring fact emerging as a result of the recent wars. They have provided wrecked cities and towns, in many countries, with a lot of useful building materials. People just delve in the wide-spread rubbish piles and dig out the brick, stone and concrete, and prepare to use it for new buildings. In older countries the same material has been used over and over again. And some of our American connoisseurs find it interesting to dig among the relics and retrieve ancient relics.

But speaking in general, our people don't really find much satisfaction in such pursuits. We want nice new houses—not time-worn antiques. And we may soon be developing types of homes that can be changed over week-ends for cleaner and fresher abodes. There might be quite a business developed along that line. And it might be tied in very nicely with the business of building house trailers.

Those gentle Germans seem to be engaging in a quiet campaign to gain the world's sympathy.

Congresswoman Francis P. Bolton says foreign nations have an almost childlike faith in American ability to produce miracles. We're good, but not quite that good.

Half of the people in this country don't know what's going on in the world, and don't care; the other half read the paper and get things done.

Whether Stalin believes it or not, there are other governments in the world, and strong, free, voting citizens.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—"We flipped a coin to see who'd be president and I lost."

That's Cheryl Crawford, most business-like of Broadway producers, describing how she happens to be the boss-of-record of the American Repertory Theater, Inc., and why she currently is somewhat at sea in those strange financial waters where stocks are sold.

Miss Crawford has been around the theater long enough to know most of its secrets, but she never delved in selling stocks before and this preferred, common, class A, class B, etc., business isn't her type of production.

However, stock in the new organization is finding its way to investors and she expects that within a short time all of the $300,000 needed to start the project will be in the books. The offering was 600 shares of preferred and 600 shares of common stock.

The American Repertory Theater, Inc., is going to be exactly what the name says—a repertory theater. People interested in the drama as something more than the difference between a Broadway hit and flop are always talking repertory theater. Occasionally some enthusiasts will make a feeble stab at starting one, with the best of intentions, but they've never gotten any place around here since Eve Le Gallienne had to close up her Fourteenth street theater venture back in the earl thirties when the depression caught up with those who had been keeping it going financially. Her admission prices were so low it couldn't be self-supporting.

Although Miss Le Gallienne is one of the prime movers in this project, it will be different than the one in which she was everything from star to chief cook and bottle washer. The new theater is intended to be a money-making proposition, with top price at $3 a seat.

"However," Miss Crawford explained, "we'll try to have a large enough house so we can have more cheaper seats that you find in the usual Broadway theater. Also we plan to have special rates for student groups. There will be a membership plan, too, but this will involve getting choice seats rather than seats at reduced prices."

The stock in the venture is being sold simply on a word-of-mouth basis. There are no high pressure salesmen in the field. "I can't see paying commissions to anyone," Miss Crawford explained. "We need all of that money ourselves."

And apparently salesmen aren't necessary. There seem to be enough people around with both money and a love of the theater who need nothing more than news of the plan to sit down and sign a check.

"We got a check for $1,000 from a nurse in Toledo, O.," the producer said, in illustrating how the contributions are not confined to New York. "She wrote that this stock might make as much money as an investment in U. S. steel and it certainly would provide more fun."

The "big four" of the repertory plan are the Misses Le Gallienne, Crawford, Margaret Webster, the director, and Victor Jory. Miss Le Gallienne and Jory will be the top players (currently they're starring in "Therese"). Miss Webster, naturally, will do much of the directing, but not all of it. Miss Le Gallienne undoubtedly will direct occasionally and outsiders will be called in as the occasions arise. Negotiations are in progress to secure what Miss Crawford called a pair of "younger

DIET AND HEALTH

Illness Caused by an Ameba

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

MOST people know what dysentery is. Many think it is the polite name for just plain, every-day diarrhea. But what many do not know is that dysentery includes a variety of diseases that produce diarrhea. Among these is amebiasis.

However, the term "amebiasis" includes all of the various conditions which are produced by the organism called the Endamoeba histolytica when it gets into the human body. There may be mild infections in which there are only digestive upsets.

Severe Cases
There are more severe cases in which there is prolonged diarrhea, and there are other cases in which complications develop when the parasite gets into the liver, lungs, brain, skin or other organs.

The most frequent complication of amebiasis is probably the formation of abscesses in the liver. Abscess of the liver usually occurs after attacks of diarrhea, but may occur in patients who have never had such attacks. Abscesses in the lung, brain, spleen and other organs caused by the ameba have also been frequently noted.

Ulcer Caused
Sometimes, an ulcer caused by the ameba in the intestine may cause the bowel to break open, producing a severe infection of the lining membrane of the abdomen called peritonitis.

Amebiasis is treated with a variety of drugs. One of those employed is emetine. This drug has been found helpful in controlling the symptoms of amebic dysentery but does not eliminate the infection, according to Doctor Juan Arosemena of New Orleans. If emetine is used over a prolonged period of time, it may cause some damage to the heart muscle.

After Drug

After taking the drug, sickness to the stomach and vomiting may occur. Thus, emetine must be carefully used if at all; other preparations may be found to work better and be less dangerous.

Other drugs employed are preparations containing iodine, which seem to have a direct effect in killing the parasite. Furthermore, these drugs do not seem to have the toxic effect of emetine.

Drugs containing arsenic are also employed. Of course, all drugs must be used with care in order to prevent arsenical poisoning.

One of the sulfonamide preparations known as sulfasuxidine has also been used in certain patients with good results.

Iodine Preparations

The iodine-containing preparations cannot be used in patients who are sensitive to iodine or who have disease of the thyroid gland. The arsenic preparations cannot be used when there is kidney or liver disease present.

A diagnosis of amebiasis can usually be made on the basis of the symptoms and finding of the parasites in the bowel movements. Once a diagnosis is made, the physician will decide which type of treatment can be employed most successfully.

ONCE IN A BLUE MOON

THERE ARE fancy plays that you almost never see, and which therefore have almost no day-after-day value. But any play ever discovered will come up once in a blue moon. When it does, the player who is smart enough to figure it out and make it is just so much to the good. The real star has a whole bagful of such devices, none of which can be used often. The bunch of them, however, offer him an opportunity every once in a while to put over a stroke which is worthwhile and which would not be likely to be scored by a lesser cardman.

The brilliant Fred J. Slater was ready for a big slam bid as soon as he heard his partner make a vulnerable opening bid, and the 2-Club call was simply to head off the lead of that suit.

Twelve probable tricks were countable when West led the heart J, with no good shot at the thirteenth except through some kind of squeeze. Mr. Slater built a beauty, which forced West into a discard on one trick that left East helpless on the next.

He scored the heart K on the first lead, then the Q, on which East shed a club. Followed then his playing down to a pattern he figured out. He took the spade A, then all of his diamonds. As he played the last, West had two hearts, which he had to keep as defense against the A-8, and three clubs, one of which he discarded. East had no trouble on that trick. He threw the spade J and kept the K to protect against the dummy's 3, also three clubs over the dummy's three.

When the heart A was led, however, East was squeezed right. The spade Q was tossed from the dummy. If East had then thrown off his spade K, South would have finished with the spade 8 and two clubs. East instead tossed a club, so the club A, K and 8 completed the grand slam.

CHAPTER ONE

November 19th

THE GROUP round the fireplace was nearly all composed of lawyers or those who had an interest in the law. There was Martindale the solicitor, Rufus Lord, K. C., young Daniel who had made a name for himself in the Carstairs case, a sprinkling of other barristers, Mr. Justice Cleaver Lewis of Lewis and Trench and old Mr. Treves. Mr. Treves was close on 80, a very ripe and experienced 80. He was a member of a famous firm of solicitors, and the most famous member of that firm. He had settled innumerable delicate cases out of court, he was said to know more backstairs history than any man in England and he was a specialist on criminology.

Unthinking people said Mr. Treves ought to write his memoirs. Mr. Treves knew better. He knew that he knew too much.

Though he had long retired from active practice, there was no man in England whose opinion was so respected by the members of his own fraternity. Whenever his thin precise little voice was raised there was always a respectful silence.

The conversation now was on the subject of a much talked of case which had finished that day at the Old Bailey. It was a murder case and the prisoner had been acquitted. The present company was busy making technical criticisms.

The prosecution had made a mistake in relying on one of its witnesses—old Deleach ought to have realized what an opening he was giving to the defense. Young Arthur had made the most of that servant girl's evidence. Bentmore, in his summing up, had very rightly put the matter in its correct perspective, but the mischief was done by then—the jury had believed the girl. Juries were funny—you never knew what they'd swallow and what they wouldn't—but let them once get a thing into their heads and no one was ever going to get it out again. They believed that the girl was speaking the truth about the crowbar and that was that. The medical evidence had been a bit above their heads. All these long terms and scientific jargon—bad witnesses, these scientific johnnies—always hemmed and hawed and couldn't say yes or no to a plain question—always "under certain circumstances" that might take place—and so on!

They talked themselves out, little by little, and as the remarks became more spasmodic and disjointed, a general feeling grew of something lacking. One head after another turned in the direction of Mr. Treves. For Mr. Treves had yet contributed nothing to the discussion. Gradually it became apparent that the company were waiting for a final word from their most respected colleague.

Mr. Treves, leaning back in his chair, was absent-mindedly polishing his glasses. Something in the silence made him look up sharply. "Eh?" he said. "What was that? You asked me something?" Young Lewis spoke:

"We were talking, sir, about the Lamorne case."

He paused expectantly. "Yes, yes," said Mr. Treves. "I was thinking of that."

There was a respectful hush.

"But I'm afraid," said Mr. Treves, still polishing, "that I was being fanciful. Yes, fanciful. Result of getting on in years, I suppose. At my age one can claim the privilege of being fanciful, if one likes."

"Yes, indeed, sir," said young Lewis, but he looked puzzled.

"I was thinking," said Mr. Treves, "not so much of the various points of law raised—though they were interesting—very interesting—if the verdict had gone the other way there would have been good grounds for appeal. I rather think—but I won't go into that now. I was thinking, as I say, not of the points of law, but of the well of the people in the case."

Everybody looked rather astonished. They had considered the people in the case only as regarded their credibility or otherwise as witnesses. None of them had even hazarded a speculation as to whether the prisoner had been guilty or as innocent as the court had pronounced him to be.

"Human beings, you know," said Mr. Treves, thoughtfully. "Human beings. All kinds and sorts and sizes and shapes of 'em. Some with brains and a good many more without. They'd come from all over the place, Lancashire, Scotland—that restaurant proprietor from Italy, and that school teacher woman from somewhere out Middle West. All caught up and enmeshed in the thing and finally all brought together in a court of law in London on a gray November day. Each one contributing his little part. The whole thing culminating in a trial for murder."

He paused and gently beat a delicate tattoo on his knee.

"I like a good detective story," he said. "But, you know, they begin in the wrong place! They begin with the murder. But the murder is the end. The story begins long before that—years before sometimes—with all the causes and events that bring certain people to a certain place at a certain time on a certain day. Take that little maid servant's evidence—if the kitchen maid hadn't pinned her young man she wouldn't have thrown up her situation in a huff and gone to the Lamorne and been the principal witness for the defense. That Giuseppe Antonelli—coming over to exchange with his brother for a month. The brother is as blind as a bat. He wouldn't have seen what Giuseppe's sharp eyes saw. If the constable hadn't been sweet on the cook at No. 48, he wouldn't have been late on his beat. . . ."

He nodded his head gently: "All converging towards a given spot. . . . And then when the time comes—over the top! Zero hour. Yes, all of them converging towards zero. . . ."

He repeated: "Towards zero." Then gave a quick little shudder.

"You're cold, sir, come nearer the fire."

"No, no," said Mr. Treves. "Just someone walking over my grave, as they say. Well, well, I must be making my way homeward."

He gave an affable little nod and went slowly and precisely out of the room.

There was a moment's dubious silence and then Rufus Lord, K. C., remarked that poor old Treves was getting on.

Sir William Cleaver said: "An acute brain—a very acute brain—but Anno Domini tells in the end."

"Got a groggy heart, too," said Lord. "May drop down any minute I believe."

"He takes pretty good care of himself," said young Lewis.

At that moment Mr. Treves was carefully stepping into his smooth-running Daimler. It deposited him at a house in a quiet square. A solicitous butler valet helped him off with his coat. Mr. Treves walked into his library where a coal fire was burning. His bedroom lay beyond, for out of consideration for his heart he never went upstairs.

He sat down in front of the fire and drew his letters towards him. His mind was still dwelling on the fancy he had outlined at the club.

"Even now," thought Mr. Treves to himself, "some drama—some murder to be—in is course of preparation. If I were writing one of these amusing stories of blood and crime, I should begin now with an elderly gentleman sitting in front of the fire opening his letters—going, unbeknownst to himself—towards zero. . . ."

He slit open an envelope and gazed down absently at the sheet he abstracted from it.

Suddenly his expression changed. He came back from romance to reality.

"Dear me," said Mr. Treves. "How extremely annoying! Really, how very vexing. After all these years! This will alter all my plans."

Did Outside Pressure Balk Settlement of Oil Strike?

Hint Interference in Case By Steel, Auto Industries

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Labor department insiders are convinced that Secretary of Labor Schwelienbach's negotiations to settle the oil strikes would have succeeded had petroleum industry representatives acted as free agents.

One labor official declared that the conciliation parley collapsed and the government seized the struck refineries because the oil industry was under terrific pressure from outside sources not to accept the Schwelienbach proposal.

This informant insisted that the oil bigwigs were in constant communication with their home offices during the parley and received through them the views of steel, automobile and other major industries.

These other industrial groups, he explained, put on the pressure to have the federal settlement rejected. The oil industry, with extremely low labor costs, could have agreed to the Schwelienbach plan or even the union's 30 per cent wage demand without fear, the official said.

Other big industries, however, were afraid to have a pattern set which might give the union an increase of around 22 or 25 per cent. They feared such a pattern might be applied to their operations where labor costs are high and a price squeeze would immediately result.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS are talking about possibilities of lifting meat rationing—or liberalizing it further—in November. Action depends on the supply-demand picture, but indications are you may be able to buy meat without points within a month.

Lewis Schwelienbach

Positive action will not be taken, however, until the OPA and the Agriculture department have decided the demand for meat has slackened off enough to warrant the action.

There will be plenty of turkeys and many more chickens available this fall. The increase in poultry will come as a result of sharp military cutbacks in buying. This will further ease the demand for meat.

DESPITE THE DECISION of President and Mrs. Truman not to resume the usual series of pretentious White House receptions which marked the Washington social season, other noted entertainers are gradually emerging from the dimout imposed by wartime conditions.

The embassies and legations which were always famous for their brilliant and usually jammed receptions are returning slowly to old schedules as fast as imports of Scotch resume. Champagne is still notably absent and will remain so for some time. And, the white tie affair is still exceptional.

The hasty increase in receptions is due not so much to light-hearted gaiety but to practical necessity. Many missions are coming to the capital in connection with the untangling of war imposed problems and each needs to be entertained and introduced to U. S. officials at dinners and parties. The receptions serve to give the visitors and their hosts a chance to put before responsible American officials the point of view of the particular country seeking to enter into any special agreement with the United States.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE CLINTON ANDERSON, the nation's number one food man, talks about sugar by the millions of pounds down at his office.

At home, he says, it's a different story. The Anderson sugar bowl is currently empty, the secretary reports. Things have reached the point where he is forced to "maneuver" for a thimble full of the sweet stuff.

The other day, he relates, he had dinner at a friend's home and there were little paper packages of sugar on the coffee cups.

The secretary slipped his packet in a side pocket. For a little while, he said, his family had sugar. But now they're out again.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY
By JACK GAVER
NEW YORK, Oct. 24—"We flipped a coin to see who'd be president and I lost."
That's Cheryl Crawford, most business-like of Broadway producers, describing how she happens to be the boss-of-record of the American Repertory Theater, Inc., and why she currently is somewhat at sea in those strange financial waters where stocks are sold.
Miss Crawford has been around the theater long enough to know most of its secrets, but she never delved in selling stocks before and this preferred, common, class A, class B, etc., business isn't her type of production.
However, stock in the new organization is finding its way to investors and she expects that within a short time all of the $300,000 needed to start the project will be in the books. The offering was 600 shares of preferred and 600 shares of common stock.
The American Repertory Theater, Inc., is going to be exactly what the name says—a repertory theater. People interested in the drama as something more than the difference between a Broadway hit and flop are always talking repertory theater. Occasionally some enthusiasts will make a feeble stab at starting one, with the best of intentions, but they've never gotten any place around here since Eve Le Gallienne had to close up her Fourteenth street theater venture back in the early thirties when the depression caught up with those who had been keeping it going financially. Her admission prices were so low it couldn't be self-supporting.
Although Miss Le Gallienne is one of the prime movers in this project, it will be different than the one in which she was everything from star to chief cook and bottle washer. The new theater is intended to be a money-making proposition, with top price at $3 a seat.
"However," Miss Crawford explained, "we'll try to have a large enough house so we can have more cheaper seats that you find in the usual Broadway theater. Also we plan to have special rates for student groups. There will be a membership plan, too, but this will involve getting choice seats rather than seats at reduced prices."
The stock in the venture is being sold simply on a word-of-mouth basis. There are no high pressure salesmen in the field.
"I can't see paying commissions to anyone," Miss Crawford explained. "We need all of that money ourselves."
And apparently salesmen aren't necessary. There seem to be enough people around with both money and a love of the theater who need nothing more than news of the plan to sit down and sign a check.
"We got a check for $1,000 from a nurse in Toledo, O.," the producer said, in illustrating how the contributions are not confined to New York. "She wrote that this stock might make as much money as an investment in U. S. steel and it certainly would provide more fun."
The "big four" of the repertory plan are the Misses Le Gallienne, Crawford, Margaret Webster, the director, and Victor Jory. Miss Le Gallienne and Jory will be the top players (currently they're starring in "Therese"). Miss Webster, naturally, will do much of the directing, but not all of it. Miss Le Gallienne undoubtedly will direct occasionally and outsiders will be called in as the occasions arise. Negotiations are in progress to secure what Miss Crawford called a pair of "younger" (Continued from Page Eight)

DIET AND HEALTH •
Illness Caused by an Ameba
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.
MOST people know what dysentery is. Many think it is the polite name for just plain, every-day diarrhea. But what many do not know is that dysentery includes a variety of diseases that produce diarrhea. Among these is amebiasis.
However, the term "amebiasis" includes all of the various conditions which are produced by the organism called the Endamoeba histolytica when it gets into the human body. There may be mild infections in which there are only digestive upsets.
Severe Cases
There are more severe cases in which there is prolonged diarrhea, and there are other cases in which complications develop when the parasite gets into the liver, lungs, brain, skin or other organs.
The most frequent complication of amebiasis is probably the formation of abscesses in the liver. Abscess of the liver usually occurs after attacks of diarrhea, but may occur in patients who have never had such attacks. Abscesses in the lung, brain, spleen and other organs caused by the ameba have also been frequently noted.
Ulcer Caused
Sometimes, an ulcer caused by the ameba in the intestine may cause the bowel to break open, producing a severe infection of the lining membrane of the abdomen called peritonitis.
Amebiasis is treated with a variety of drugs. One of those employed is emetine. This drug has been found helpful in controlling the symptoms of amebic dysentery but does not eliminate the infection, according to Doctor Juan Arosemena of New Orleans. If emetine is used over a prolonged period of time, it may cause some damage to the heart muscle.
After Drug
After taking the drug, sickness to the stomach and vomiting may occur. Thus, emetine must be carefully used if at all; other preparations may be found to work better and be less dangerous.
Other drugs employed are preparations containing iodine, which seem to have a direct effect in killing the ameba and eliminating the parasite. Furthermore, these drugs do not seem to have the toxic effect of emetine.
Drugs containing arsenic are also employed. Of course, all drugs must be used with care in order to prevent arsenical poisoning.
One of the sulfonamide preparations known as sulfasuxidine has also been used in certain patients with good results.
Iodine Preparations
The iodine-containing preparations cannot be used in patients who are sensitive to iodine or who have disease of the thyroid gland. The arsenic preparations cannot be used when there is kidney or liver disease present.
A diagnosis of amebiasis can usually be made on the basis of the symptoms and finding of the parasites in the bowel movements. Once a diagnosis is made, the physician will decide which type of treatment can be employed most successfully.

GOOD WILL
THIS may be a good time to cultivate some new lodges or other organizations, along the general line of Societies for the Preservation of the Human Race. Many people lately have lost faith in mankind, and to tell the truth they can't be blamed much for their disillusionment.
Yet, humanly speaking, this has been a pretty good old world in its time, with quite a few things about it that will still bear inspection. There are still, on this planet and in the hearts of ordinary people, enormous reservoirs of good will. For the most part, when we go wrong in a big way it is through fear. And lately fear drives us to the production of bombs so powerful that, for a little while at least, they can renew confidence in our own life and its opportunities.
But it is not well to put our faith altogether in bombs, or in any other material or destructive thing. The only thing that really counts, on this worried planet, is the ancient recipe of "Peace on Earth to men of Good will." When good will is lost, all is lost.

REBUILDING
WELL, there is at least one reassuring fact emerging as a result of the recent wars. They have provided wrecked cities and towns, in many countries, with a lot of useful building materials. People just delve in the wide-spread rubbish piles and dig out the brick, stone and concrete, and prepare to use it for new buildings. In older countries the same material has been used over and over again. And some of our American connoisseurs find it interesting to dig among the relics and retrieve ancient relics.
But speaking in general, our people don't really find much satisfaction in such pursuits. We want nice new houses—not time-worn antiques. And we may soon be developing types of homes that can be changed over week-ends for cleaner and fresher abodes. There might be quite a business developed along that line. And it might be tied in very nicely with the business of building house trailers.

Those gentle Germans seem to be engaging in a quiet campaign to gain the world's sympathy.
Congresswoman Francis P. Bolton says foreign nations have an almost childlike faith in American ability to produce miracles. We're good, but not quite that good.
Half of the people in this country don't know what's going on in the world, and don't care; the other half read the paper and get things done.
Whether Stalin believes it or not, there are other governments in the world, and strong, free, voting citizens.

Inside WASHINGTON
Did Outside Pressure Balk Hint Interference in Case Settlement of Oil Strike? By Steel, Auto Industries
Special to Central Press
● WASHINGTON—Labor department insiders are convinced that Secretary of Labor Schwelbenbach's negotiations to settle the oil strikes would have succeeded had petroleum industry representatives acted as free agents.
One labor official declared that the conciliation parley collapsed and the government seized the struck refineries because the oil industry was under terrific pressure from outside sources not to accept the Schwelbenbach proposal.
This informant insisted that the oil bigwigs were in constant communication with their home offices during the parley and received through them the views of steel, automobile and other major industries.
These other industrial groups, he explained, put on the pressure to have the federal settlement rejected. The oil industry, with extremely low labor costs, could have agreed to the Schwelbenbach plan or even the union's 30 per cent wage demand without fear, the official said.
Other big industries, however, were afraid to have a pattern set which might give the union an increase of around 22 or 25 per cent. They feared such a pattern might be applied to their operations where labor costs are high and a price squeeze would immediately result.
● GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS are talking about possibilities of lifting meat rationing—or liberalizing it further—in November. Action depends on the supply-demand picture, but indications are you may be able to buy meat without points within a month.

ONCE IN A BLUE MOON THERE ARE fancy plays that you almost never see, and which therefore have almost no day-after-day value. But any play ever discovered will come up once in a blue moon. When it does, the player who is smart enough to figure it out and make it is just so much to the good. The real star has a whole bagful of such devices, none of which can be used often. The bunch of them, however, offer him an opportunity every once in a while to put over a stroke which is worthwhile and which would not be likely to be scored by a lesser cardman.

a discard on one trick that left East helpless on the next.
He scored the heart K on the first lead, then the Q, on which East shed a club. Followed then his playing down to a pattern he figured out. He took the spade A, then all of his diamonds. As he played the last, West had two hearts, which he had to keep as defense against the A-8, and three clubs, one of which he discarded. East had no trouble on that trick. He threw the spade J and kept the K to protect against the dummy's Q, also three clubs over the dummy's three.
When the heart A was led, however, East was squeezed right. The spade Q was tossed from the dummy. If East had then thrown off his spade K, South would have finished with the spade 8 and two clubs. East instead tossed a club, so the club A, K and 8 completed the grand slam.

TOWARDS ZERO
Agatha Christie
CHAPTER ONE
November 19th
THE GROUP round the fireplace was nearly all composed of lawyers or those who had an interest in the law. There was Martindale the solicitor, Rufus Lord, K. C., young Daniels who had made a name for himself in the Carstairs case, a sprinkling of other barristers, Mr. Justice Cleaver Lewis of Lewis and Trench and old Mr. Treves. Mr. Treves was close on 80, a very ripe and experienced 80. He was a member of a famous firm of solicitors, and the most famous member of that firm. He had settled innumerable delicate cases out of court, he was said to know more backstairs history than any man in England and he was a specialist on criminology.
Unthinking people said Mr. Treves ought to write his memoirs. Mr. Treves knew better. He knew that he knew too much.
Though he had long retired from active practice, there was no man in England whose opinion was so respected by the members of his own fraternity. Whenever his thin precise little voice was raised there was always a respectful silence.
The conversation now was on the subject of a much talked of case which had finished that day at the Old Bailey. It was a murder case and the prisoner had been acquitted. The present company was busy making technical criticisms.
The prosecution had made a mistake in relying on one of its witnesses—old Depleach ought to have realized what an opening he was giving to the defense. Young Arthur had made the most of that servant girl's evidence, Bentmore, in his summing up, had very rightly put the matter in its correct perspective, but the mischief was done by then—the jury had believed the girl. Juries were funny—you never knew what they'd swallow and what they wouldn't—but let them once get a thing into their heads and no one was ever going to get it out again. They believed that the girl was speaking the truth about the crowbar and that was that. The medical evidence had been a bit above their heads. All those long terms and scientific jargon—bad witnesses, these scientific johnnies—always hemmed and hawed and couldn't say yes or no to a plain question—always "under certain circumstances" that might take place—and so on!
They talked themselves out, little by little, and as the remarks became more spasmodic and disjointed, a general feeling grew of something lacking. One head after another turned in the direction of Mr. Treves. For Mr. Treves had as yet contributed nothing to the discussion. Gradually it became apparent that the company were waiting for a final word from their most respected colleague.
Mr. Treves, leaning back in his chair, was absent-mindedly polishing his glasses. Something in the silence made him look up sharply. "Eh?" he said. "What was that? You asked me something?"
Young Lewis spoke: "We were talking, sir, about the Lamorne case."
He paused expectantly.
"Yes, yes," said Mr. Treves. "I was thinking of that."
There was a respectful hush.
"But I'm afraid," said Mr. Treves, still polishing, "that I was being fanciful. Yes, fanciful. Result of getting on in years, I suppose. At my age one can claim the privilege of being fanciful, if one likes."
"Yes, indeed, sir," said young Lewis, but he looked puzzled.
"I was thinking," said Mr. Treves, "not so much of the various points of law raised—though they were interesting—very interesting—if the verdict had gone the other way there would have been good grounds for appeal. I rather think—but I won't go into that now. I was thinking, as I say, not of the points of law, but of the well, of the people in the case."
Everybody looked rather astonished. They had considered the people in the case only as regarded their credibility or otherwise as witnesses. None of them had even hazarded a speculation as to whether the prisoner had been guilty or as innocent as the court had pronounced him to be.
"Human beings, you know," said Mr. Treves, thoughtfully. "Human beings. All kinds and sorts and sizes and shapes of 'em. Some with brains and a good many more without. They come from all over the place, Lancashire, Scotland—that restaurant proprietor from Italy, and that school teacher woman from somewhere out Middle West. All caught up and enmeshed in the thing and finally all brought together in a court of law in London on a gray November day. Each one contributing his little part. The whole thing culminating in a trial for murder."
He paused and gently beat a delicate tattoo on his knee.
"I like a good detective story," he said. "But, you know, they begin in the wrong place! They begin with the murder. But the murder is the end. The story begins long before that—years before sometimes—with all the causes and events that bring certain people to a certain place at a certain time on a certain day. Take that little maid servant's evidence—if the kitchen maid hadn't pinched her young man she wouldn't have thrown up her situation in a huff and gone to the name of her former husband, such as 'Anna Brown Smith.'"

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of progress and expansion, probably arising from a turn of the wheel of fortune. Such opportunity may depend entirely on well-laid plans and practical analysis, in which friends or superiors may be substantially cooperative.

Chairmen Make Reports At DAR October Meeting

Mrs. Bales Reads Paper, 'Porridge Bowl and Pewter'

Reports of a number of committee chairmen were received by Mrs. Charles Pugsley, president of the Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution at the October meeting of that group which was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bryce Briggs, North Scioto street.

Following the ritualistic opening service Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, chairman of the National defense committee, reported 31 "buddy bags" had been sent to Mrs. Arthur Houghton, national chairman to be included in the last shipment for service men in the Pacific area and a letter of appreciation was read from Mrs. Houghton.

Mrs. Dwight Steele, Girl Scout chairman, gave a detailed account of the troops' activities for National Girl Scout week and urged the members to attend at least one or more of the meetings. Reports were also given by Mrs. George Roth, Red Cross chairman, and Miss Elsie Jewell, chairman of historical magazine committee.

Mrs. H. O. Pile, chairman of "Approved Schools" a project of organization, submitted a report on the projects laid out for the year's work in the several mountain schools that are under the management of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. R. R. Bales presented the paper of the afternoon reading her topic "Porridge Bowl and Pewter". Her subject, Mrs. Bales told her audience, was somewhat misleading as her paper really concerned hooked rugs. The porridge bowl she said was a pattern that was used in the famous "Farmhouse" collection of hooked rugs.

Tracing the beginning of hooked rugs to the time when ancient sailors pulled hemp through canvas to make rough pieces to use on ships to pick up the chaffing of ropes Mrs. Bales told her audience how hooked rugs had come down to the present time.

She told of the beginning of weaving in England and Scotland when cloth was woven on private looms in homes and how the short pieces of yarn were used to make rugs that otherwise would have been sold as waste.

Early American settlers, Mrs. Bales said, used scraps of everything they owned to make hearth rugs which she said was a necessity in every home. It was because of this that the art of hooked rugs grew and became a cherished possession and a family pride.

All members and a guest, Mrs. Robert Betts, were present for the Tuesday evening meeting of the Magic Sewing club held at the home of Mrs. Roger Lozier, West High street.

Sewing and a contest were the diversion of the evening, Mrs. Gerald Miller winning the prize at the conclusion of the contest.

Mrs. Lozier served refreshments and the next meeting was planned for November 7 at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Gail Wolfe, Pleasant street.

The Halloween party which was to be given by the Harpers Bible class of the United Brethren church, Friday night, has been cancelled. The regular meeting will be held Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Johnson, E. Franklin street.

SCOUT LEADERS PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. YOUNG

Mrs. Bernard Young, Girl Scout commissioner, was honored by her co-workers Tuesday evening when they surprised her on her birthday anniversary, the party being planned to follow the association meeting of the organization at scout headquarters.

Mrs. Walter Heine presented Mrs. Young with a gift and a corsage from the members of the association after which she invited her to the room where refreshments were served from a beautifully appointed table. Mrs. Ralph Curtin poured coffee and Mrs. Heine served the attractively decorated cake which was her contribution to the party. Vases of autumn flowers which made the room attractive and the very pretty table decorations were the gift of Mrs. Mack Noggle. Mrs. John Eshelman, Miss Ruth Stout and Mrs. Noggle were other members of the committee.

Mrs. Heine, Miss Rose Good and Mrs. James I. Smith, Jr. were named as members of the nominating committee to report at the next meeting.

New members of the association welcomed by the group at this meeting were Mrs. Gene Rader, Joseph, Miss Ann Moeller and Miss Ruth Werkman.

An invitation was read from the Chillicothe council to attend a training meeting at the court house, Chillicothe October 30 when Mrs. Lois McCarthy of the National headquarters council members bureau will be the speaker.

Mrs. Noggle reported the gift of a camp site on Scippo creek to the Association by Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Miller.

For the program Mrs. Heine reviewed the book, Juliette Low and the Girl Scouts. She gave a very interesting picture of the founder of Girl Scouts in America. Telling how Mrs. Low was a widow with no children and almost totally deaf, she told of her many interests and her artistic talent. She started girl scouting in her native city Atlanta, Ga. and lived to see it spread to every state in the Union.

National Girl Scout week will be observed in Pickaway county October 28 to November 3 with many activities. Sunday they will attend services in uniform at the Methodist church.

Open House will be observed at Scout headquarters Thursday from 2 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. with Mrs. Vaden Couch, chairman in charge. A Court of Awards will be held in St. Philip's Parish house October 31 with a program in which all troops will participate. At this time the girls will be presented with the merit badges they have

LEE ETTA RIFE, MACK C. YOUNG ARE MARRIED

A quiet ceremony in the parsonage of Trinity Lutheran church united in marriage, Tuesday evening, Miss Lee Etta Rife and Mack Calvin Young.

The double ring service of the church was performed by the Rev. George L. Troutman in the presence of a few friends of the young couple.

Chairmen Make Reports At DAR October Meeting

Mrs. Bales Reads Paper, 'Porridge Bowl and Pewter'

Reports of a number of committee chairmen were received by Mrs. Charles Pugsley, president of the Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution at the October meeting of that group which was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bryce Briggs, North Scioto street.

Following the ritualistic opening service Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, chairman of the National defense committee, reported 31 "buddy bags" had been sent to Mrs. Arthur Houghton, national chairman to be included in the last shipment for service men in the Pacific area and a letter of appreciation was read from Mrs. Houghton.

Mrs. Dwight Steele, Girl Scout chairman, gave a detailed account of the troops' activities for National Girl Scout week and urged the members to attend at least one or more of the meetings. Reports were also given by Mrs. George Roth, Red Cross chairman, and Miss Elsie Jewell, chairman of historical jewelry committee.

Mrs. H. O. Pile, chairman of "Approved Schools" a project of organization, submitted a report on the projects laid out for the year's work in the several mountain schools that are under the management of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. R. R. Bales presented the paper of the afternoon reading her topic "Porridge Bowl and Pewter". Her subject, Mrs. Bales told her audience, was somewhat misleading as her paper really concerned hooked rugs. The porridge bowl she said was a pattern that was used in the famous "Farmhouse" collection of hooked rugs.

Tracing the beginning of hooked rugs to the time when ancient sailors pulled hemp through canvas to make rough pieces to use on ships to pick up the chaffing of ropes Mrs. Bales told her audience how hooked rugs had come down to the present time.

She told of the beginning of weaving in England and Scotland when cloth was woven on private looms in homes and how the short pieces of yarn were used to make rugs that otherwise would have been sold as waste.

Early American settlers, Mrs. Bales said, used scraps of every thing they owned to make hearth rugs which she said was a necessity in every home. It was because of this that the art of hooked rugs grew and became a cherished possession and a family pride.

The entire family united in the making, father and the boys making the frame on which the rug was woven, the smaller children gathering the berries and other drying materials with mother and the larger girls of the family doing the dying and the actual work on the rug.

Pewter, Mrs. Bales said, just naturally fitted into the hooked rug era in early American homes as it was a humble craft and a commodity for the middle class, the poorer still retaining wood and the wealthy families using silver. The prudent, self-reliant folk, the backbone of America used the pewter in their homes which today are considered as really worthy of our admiration.

An exhibit of pewter was on display, the members owning the different pieces telling the history of them.

Mrs. Kermit Dountz was in charge of music and she presented the Misses Jackie Rush, Joan Belt and Mary Rodgers in two songs, "This is My Country" by Al Jacobs and "Oh What a Beautiful Morning" from Oklahoma. Mrs. Dountz acted as accompanist for the girls who are pupils in the Scioto township school.

Mrs. Briggs and her co-hostesses served refreshments at the close of the meeting. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. Forest Brown, Mrs. Hervey Swayer, Mrs. Noah Spangler, Miss Emily Yates and Miss Benadine Yates.

4 CANDIDATES INITIATED BY OES CHAPTER

Sixty members of the local chapter Order of Eastern Star were present in the chapter room Tuesday evening for the initiation exercises when a class of 4 candidates were received into the chapter.

Mrs. Emmitt Barnhart and J. Sam Morris, matron and patron respectively, were in the chair for the ritualistic exercises, and also during the business meeting at which time plans were made for the Grand chapter meeting which will be held in Memorial Hall, Columbus next week.

A banquet will be served at the Deshler-Wallick hotel Wednesday evening and a district luncheon will also be served at the same hotel, Thursday at 2 p. m. following the installation of the Grand officers. Members who wish to attend the luncheon and the banquet are asked to call Mrs. Barnhart, not later than Thursday of this week to make reservations.

Following the meeting refreshments were served in the dining room at a table centered with chrysanthemums and decorated with Eastern Star plaques.

The November 6 meeting will be election of officers and on November 20 Friendship night will be observed with a visiting chapter in attendance.

SCOUT LEADERS PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. YOUNG

Mrs. Bernard Young, Girl Scout commissioner, was honored by her co-workers Tuesday evening when they surprised her on her birthday anniversary, the party being planned to follow the association meeting of the organization at scout headquarters.

Mrs. Walter Heine presented Mrs. Young with a gift and a corsage from the members of the association after which she invited her to the room where refreshments were served from a beautifully appointed table. Mrs. Ralph Curtin poured coffee and Mrs. Heine served the attractively decorated cake which was her contribution to the party. Vases of autumn flowers which made the room attractive and the very pretty table decorations were the gift of Mrs. Mack Noggle. Mrs. John Eshelman, Miss Ruth Stout and Mrs. Noggle were other members of the committee.

Mrs. Heine, Miss Rose Good and Mrs. James I. Smith, Jr. were named as members of the nominating committee to report at the next meeting.

New members of the association welcomed by the group at this meeting were Mrs. Gene Rader Joseph, Miss Ann Moeller and Miss Ruth Werkman.

An invitation was read from the Chillicothe council to attend a training meeting at the court house, Chillicothe October 30 when Mrs. Lois McCarthy of the National headquarters council members bureau will be the speaker.

Mrs. Noggle reported the gift of a camp site on Scioto creek to the Association by Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Miller.

For the program Mrs. Heine reviewed the book, Juliette Low and the Girl Scouts. She gave a very interesting picture of the founder of Girl Scouts in America. Telling how Mrs. Low was a widow with no children and almost totally deaf, she told of her many interests and her artistic talent. She started girl scouting in her native city Atlanta, Ga. and lived to see it spread to every state in the Union.

National Girl Scout week will be observed in Pickaway county October 25 to November 3 with many activities. Sunday they will attend services in uniform at the Methodist church.

Open House will be observed at Scout headquarters Thursday from 2 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. with Mrs. Vaden Couch, chairman in charge.

A Court of Awards will be held in St. Philip's Parish house October 31 with a program in which all troops will participate. At this time the girls will be presented with the merit badges they have

ANTI - GAMBLING CAMPAIGN WILL BE CONTINUED

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—The National Collegiate Athletic Association studied new means today for continuing its "highly successful" anti-gambling campaign for as many years as necessary.

Dr. Wilbur C. Smith of Louisiana State, chairman of the N. C. A. A. executive committee which ended a two-day meeting yesterday, called the program a "huge success."

He said N. C. A. A. members, which include most of the nation's leading universities, would pool their information at the N. C. A. A.'s annual convention in St. Louis Jan. 9-10 and map a new 1946 program to counteract the "money menace."

The N. C. A. A. began cracking down on gamblers after the Brooklyn basketball scandal last year, laying down a definite plan of attack at its January meeting this year.

HOMECOMING IS SET FOR FRIDAY NIGHT'S GAME

Dads Also To Be Honored At Contest Between CHS And Greenfield

Friday's game here with Greenfield has been designated as Homecoming Night and Dad's Night, Cincinnati high school officials announced Wednesday.

Election of a homecoming queen was scheduled for Wednesday at the school. Candidates are Ann Snider and Barbara Green, seniors and Donna Lee Merriman and Joan Webb, juniors.

Plans are being made for a pep rally Thursday night. The CHS band will be present at the rally if arrangements can be made.

Friday's festivities are scheduled to begin at 8 p. m. The queen will be presented before the game starts.

Fathers of members of the football squad will be introduced at the half. Each will be wearing a number corresponding to that of his football son.

The game promises to be one of the best of the season here. Greenfield and Cincinnati have been South Central Ohio league rivals for years and each team will be out to win. The McClain club will be trying to protect its perfect league record while the CHS Tigers will be trying to get back on the winning side of the ledger after several disappointments.

The Cincinnati team probably will be in better shape for the game than at any of the last three. No serious injuries cropped up after the Wilmington game and some of the "cripples" are getting better. Leonard Hill may return to action for at least a short time. Several changes in the lineup may be made but no definite announcements have been forthcoming from Coaches Russell Paim and Steve Brudinski.

STARKEY TEAM MEMBERS TAKE BOWLING HONORS

Three top scores in the Tuesday Women's bowling league Tuesday night were recorded by members of the Starkey Cleaners team which walked off with high team total of 1938 while winning three games from Purina. Barr had 422, Downing 421 and Clifton 417.

In other matches Croman's Chicks won three from Cincinnati Savings and Kinsey Clothing took three from Telephone company.

BASEBALL MEN HOLD COMMENT

Few Express Opinions About Signing Of First Negro By Organized Ball

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Baseball men were cautious today in their comment on the signing of negro Jackie Robinson by the Brooklyn Dodgers' Montreal farm team. Only the New York Giants said they would scout negro teams in 1946.

Robinson, 26-year-old former All-America halfback at the University of California at Los Angeles, was the first negro signed to a contract by a team in organized baseball—negro leagues are not a part of organized baseball—and Branch Rickey, Jr., who announced the signing at Montreal yesterday, said that some ball players might quit the Brooklyn organization in protest.

"If they come from certain sections in the South, they may steer away from a team with colored players," he said. "But they'll be back in baseball after a year or two in a cotton mill."

Hector Racine, president of the Montreal team, which won the International league's regular-season championship, said he expected no opposition either from the league or from fans.

"Negroes fought alongside whites and shared the foxhole dangers," he said, "and they should get a fair trial in baseball."

The Dodgers signed Robinson after Brooklyn scouts had watched negro teams for several seasons. Dodger Secretary Harold Partott said the former Army lieutenant, who batted .340 in 100 games as shortstop for the Kansas City Monarchs after his service release last Summer, was the best of 25 prospects.

Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, said his club would scout negro teams next season.

"We will look over the young negro players," he said, "but we have hundreds of returning servicemen and only if they fail to make the grade will we have room for new players."

Connie Mack, the patriarch manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, said he wasn't familiar with the move and didn't want to comment.

President William Benswanger of the Pittsburgh Pirates said that the whole thing was "the business of the Brooklyn and Montreal teams—whether it's a white man or a negro." Pirate Manager Frank Frisch also declined comment.

stars to bolster the acting company.

The stars, Miss Crawford said, are willing to work for much less than their high salaries paid by other producers. Of course, if the venture succeeds, they won't lose in the long run. Players will be signed to two-year repertory contracts.

Plans call for the group to begin operations in New York early next Fall. Two plays will be put on in quick succession—within two or three days of each other—and alternated thereafter. Meanwhile a third will be in rehearsal and will be injected into the program when it is ready. And so until six productions have been presented in the first New York season of approximately 40 weeks.

Only one new play will be used; the rest will be revivals, probably classics for the most part. The exact lineup cannot be known until the personnel is more definite.

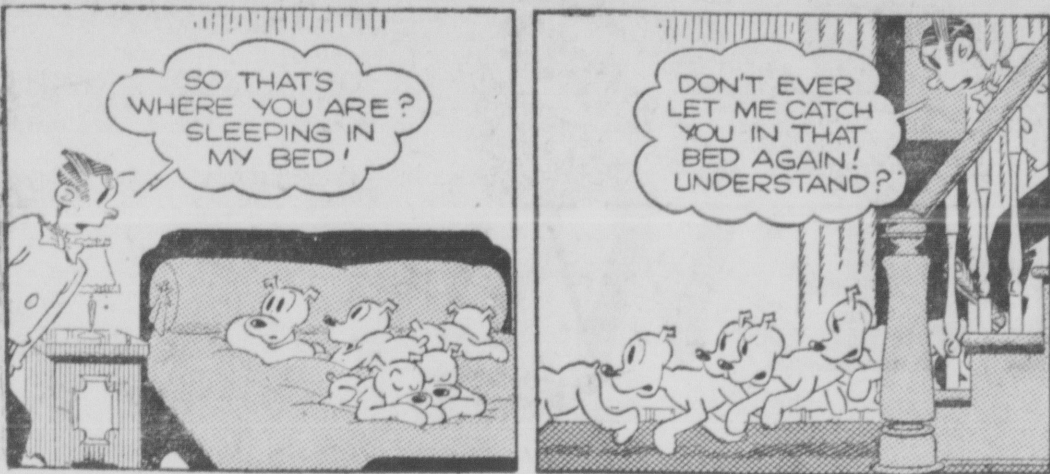

For its second season the troupe will take to the road, playing the productions which were most successful in New York and rehearsing new productions to present in the third season, 1948-49, back in New York. That's looking ahead a bit, Miss Crawford admits.

"I hope this is something that will last me the rest of my life," she explained.

CAVALLARO ON MUSIC HALL

Frank Morgan, guest maestro for the Music Hall, has back Lina Romany and Carmen Cavallaro Thursday. Fearless Morgan has not given up the idea he is a match for Carmen Cavallaro at the piano. In fact, he announces that he will match the pianist cadenza for cadenza, arpeggio for arpeggio.

HEAT MAKER ON ATOM

A man who can make it hotter for you than anyone else in the world will be one of the speakers on "America's Town Meeting," in its broadcast from St. Paul, Minn., Thursday. He is Dr. C. G. Suits, research director and vice president of General Electric, who will describe the industrial implications of the harnessing of atomic energy, in a discussion of the question, "Should We Share the Secret of the Atomic Bomb with Any Other Nation?" In the course of research in high-temperature arcs,

Dr. Suits has produced arcs of 18,000 degrees Fahrenheit, the hottest ever recorded, twice as hot as the surface of the sun.

SALUTE TO USS FRANKLIN

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello salute the men of the aircraft carrier Franklin, on Thursday. The crew of the Franklin brought her through one of the most vicious Kamikaze attacks of the Pacific war. Mirth and music are provided by these merry madmen and their vocalist, Connie Haines.

SALUTES U. S. NAVY DAY

Ted Malone, now winging his way around the world on the ATC's "Globeater," salutes this country's Navy Day celebration

(Saturday) on his Friday broadcast of "Ted Malone Tells," Malone will tell the story of the Tri-poli pirates and one of the earliest actions of the U. S. Marines. The advance schedule places Malone in Karachi, India, on the day of this broadcast.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

There's a surprise for lots of armchair experts in results of a poll being conducted independently by Harry W. Flannery, news analyst, among returned veterans on the controversial subject: "Should We Give the Atomic Bomb Secret to Russia?" Service men questioned by the commentator are voting three to one in favor of sharing the weapon with the Soviets!

Kate Smith has been voted the favorite singer of the Disabled American Veterans Association, which recently held its convention in Chicago. The star was cited for the honor because of her frequent visits to Army and Navy camps and hospitals, as well as for her numerous broadcasts to the boys overseas.

Two farmers met in town and began talking. "I hear you sold your pig," commented one. "Yep, sold him last Wednesday," replied the other. "What did you get for him?" "Eight dollars." "What did it cost to raise him?" "Paid three dollars for him, and five more for the feed." "Didn't make much, did you?" "Nope, but I had his company all Summer." (Dick Haymes' publicity writer contributes this killer-diller.)

It's not unusual for a comedian to engage gag writers to help him with material for a radio series, but Colonel Stoopnagle, the "Doubt or Nothing" quipster, not only writes his own material; he has jokes left over! He writes comic features for Saturday Evening Post and Liberty, serves as idea man for several cartoonists, has a one-a-week full page feature coming up in a newspaper syndicate, and has authored two books, "You Wouldn't Know Me From Adam" and "Father Goosenagle."

Pretty Carol Stewart, the sound effects girl who became a featured soloist on the Marlin Hurt "Beulah" Show, is now being paged for a movie career. This week she was screen-tested for a role in a new film.

During the war the seven and one-half billion dollars of radio-communications equipment was more than double all the radio equipment produced for civilian use in all the years since commercial radio began.

The town of Gloucester, Mass., was permanently settled about 1633, and a town charter was granted in 1642.

What's in a Name?

BY A STRANGE coincidence, this one pound, fifteen-ounce baby born in a Sacramento, Cal., hospital is named Midget. The diminutive young lady, shown here lying in a crib beside a 15-inch ruler, has been given the first name of Lorraine by her parents. Doctors say she has a fifty-fifty chance to survive.
